ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 9.—Coast guardsmen recovered two charred bodies from the smoldering hulk of the liner Morro Castle late today, while in New York investigators gathered for an inquiry into the marine disaster which took at least 126 lives.

Dickerson N. Hoover, assistant director of the steamboat inspection service, went from Washington to New York to start a formal inquiry at the customs house Monday at 10 a. m. Acting Captain William F. Varma, of the Morro Castle, will be the first witness, Hoover said, with all other officers called afterward.

"Every disaster," he said, "is a lesson that helps us learn to prevent others. The inquiries that follow such catastrophes enable us to improve the regulations concerning steamships."

"Though in the loss of any ship the loss of life is nearly always high, sea travel has come now to be the safest of all."

Crew Members to Testify.
After the officers testify, members of the crew and passengers will be called.

"We will summon those who seem from newspaper accounts to have something to say," he added, "and those whose names are brought in by other witnesses. The Ward Line has promised to help us and is co-operating in every way."

The only possible steamship inspection service can impose, he explained, is removal of an officer's license. If evidence should be found of negligence by a steamship company, the matter would be reported to the collector of customs who could levy a fine.

United States Attorney Martin Conboy will be invited to attend the hearing, said to ascertain whether there is evidence of criminal responsibility, a usual practice in the case of a major disaster.

City, County Schools Reopen This Morning

Approximately 74,000 Atlanta and Fulton county school students will return to classrooms for 1934-35 term this morning.

There is an estimated enrollment of 54,000 in Atlanta schools and officials predict that the figure will increase to 60,000 before the end of the present school year. Fulton county has an estimated enrollment of more than 20,000 of last year, Superintendent J. A. Wells announced.

Only routine matters are slated for consideration at Tuesday afternoon's meeting of the board of education.

A successor to Miss Mamie L. Pitts, who will retire on pension, is expected to be designated at the board meeting. Miss Pitts served mainly as principal of the J. Allen Couch school.

LOCAL: About 74,000 Atlanta and Fulton county school students will return to classrooms for 1934-35 term this morning.

Governor Eugene Talmadge to make final public address of campaign this afternoon at Athens; Dr. S. V. Sanford to introduce speaker.

Most of the Fulton county candidates will appear at city auditorium tonight sponsored by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, gubernatorial candidate.

Ernest L. Bergstrom, member of prominent Atlanta family and owner and developer of Idle of Wright, died at Savannah.

Plane Crash Is Fatal To Airport Spectator

DAYTON, Ohio, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Arnold Hiss, 29, of Logansport, Ind., was killed late today at the Dayton Municipal airport, Vandavia, when an airplane, piloted by Verne H. Rhea, of Dayton, and said to have carried two passengers, settled back onto the field after taking off, and struck two planes parked along the edge.

Rhea's plane and one of the others burned. Hiss was one of a group of spectators standing near the plane.

TAYLOR IS FREED IN KNIFE MURDER OF ALABAMA GIRL

Jury Acquits Birmingham Man in Death of Faye New After Deliberating 26 Hours.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 9.—(AP) A jury in Jefferson circuit court this afternoon acquitted Harold Taylor, 28, of charges of slaying Faye New, 19-year-old co-ed, as the climax to an automobile ride on the night of August 20. The jury had been out 26 hours when it reported a verdict had been reached.

The verdict was delayed more than half an hour until the attorneys and Judge Russell McElroy could be summoned to the courthouse to hear the verdict which was announced at 3:25 p. m. (central standard time.)

Taylor, impetuous and state through the trial, wept as import of the foreman's words dawned on him, and his attorney, Morel Montgomery, called a recess.

The crowd that jammed the small courtroom remained deathly quiet as the verdict was announced and except for a faint gasp from various sections only the sobbing of Taylor broke the silence.

Judge J. Russell McElroy had warned the courtroom before the verdict was reached that any demonstration would result in the participants immediately to jail.

Taylor went on trial Tuesday morning, a few hours more than two weeks after he drove away to a secluded spot with Faye New who never returned.

The defendant declared that the girl jumped from his car in indignation shortly after midnight on the morning of August 21, and ran into underbrush.

The afternoon of August 22, the girl's body, two deep slashes in her throat, was found a mile from the spot where Taylor said she had killed him.

The state charged Taylor had killed the girl to seal her lips when she refused to satisfy his lustful desires. The defense claimed there was no motive for Taylor to slay the girl.

F. D. R.'s Son, 'Lost' At Sea, Is Found

PORTLAND, Maine, Sept. 9.—(AP) While coast guard craft combed the sea off the New England coast for James Roosevelt, eldest son of the president, and his underlings on board the schooner Black Arrow, of New Bedford, Mass., the 50-foot auxiliary craft made port safely here tonight.

Acknowledging that the crew had experienced an "uncomfortable" night, as last night's "no-rear" made their craft unmanageable, Roosevelt said, however, that they never were in danger at any time.

Informing that 11 coast guard craft had put to sea to join the search, the word that the craft was missing had been broadcast, and the order of Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlett, additional craft, including destroyers and coast guard planes, were to take up the hunt this afternoon, Roosevelt expressed surprise.

"Of course it was blowing plenty," he said. "Water was coming over the boat, so we battered everything down. It was mighty disagreeable and uncomfortable, but at no time were we in danger."

MAINE VOTE TODAY TEST OF NEW DEAL

Congressional, Gubernatorial Primaries Slated for Week in Ten States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP) The hotly contested test of the New Deal in tomorrow's Maine election opening a week of political show-downs including primaries in 10 states which involve five senate and 90 house seats, and eight governorships.

Republican leaders wound up the battle for political supremacy in Maine with charges by Representative Bolton, republican, Ohio, and Chairman Fletcher, of their national committee, that the administration was attempting to "bribe" voters in that state.

The test comes on the election of a senator, a governor and three house members. It is a forerunner of elections in 47 other states, on November 6, and its result will be used by the winning party because of the advantage that Maine goes, so goes the nation.

Democrats now hold the governorship and two house seats, republicans one house seat and the senate seat to be filled. The veteran senator, Frederick Hale, is opposed by F. Harold DuBois, democrat; Governor Louis J. Brann is opposed by Alfred K. Ames, conservative republican and wealthy retired lumberman. Representative Carroll L. Beedy, veteran republican from the first district, is opposed by Simon M. Hamlin, democrat.

Former Governor Ralph O. Brewster, republican, seeks to unseat John G. Utterback, democrat, from the third district, while Representative Edward C. Moran Jr., democrat, is opposed by Z. M. Drival, republican, in the second.

Leaders of both major parties concentrated their best speakers on the state in desperate efforts to swing it to their respective victory for the psychological effect victory might have.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the republican national committee, and Representative Bolton, chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee, both predicted victory for their candidates, although democratic chiefs claimed Governor Brann's re-election was assured.

The results of the election in the usually republican state undoubtedly will have a clarifying effect on the political situation with regard to the New Deal, and the democratic and republican issues.

Primaries for the house will be held Tuesday in seven states—Arizona, Colorado, Louisiana, Michigan, New Hampshire, Vermont and Washington; in two Wednesday—Maryland and Georgia; and in New York Thursday, where candidates for 45 house seats will be named. Candidates for the senate seat held by Senator Royal S. Copeland, democrat, New York, will be selected at state party conventions later.

WASHINGTON, pick senate candidates Tuesday, with Maryland voters doing likewise Wednesday. Arizona, Colorado, Michigan, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York and Georgia also have to select gubernatorial candidates.

Officer Boards Gutted Liner, Finds Body in Smoking Inferno

Once Luxurious Craft Now a Mass of Twisted Steel and Ashes Blanketed by Unbearable Heat.

By R. W. HODGE,
Acting Commander Coast Guard 5th District.
(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)
ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 9.—I was the first person to inspect the Morro Castle, and I found her a gutted shell, so terribly hot that it burned my feet, and seared and blistered my hands whenever I touched the iron plates.

If there is still anything in the hold of the ship, there wouldn't be anything left of them, except perhaps some broken jewelry.

When the ship beached in front of the convention hall a local fireman went out in a skiff and crawled up the line trailing from the stern. We shot a line aboard and rigged up our breeches buoy. As soon as it was ready I climbed in and shot over to the liner, about 9 or 10 o'clock today.

There is no way to describe the terrible heat and the choking smoke. I had to put on a gas mask as I started forward from the stern where I came on board.

As I groped my way forward on the hot deck, I reached midships when I stumbled over a charred body sprawled face downward on the deck. It was apparently that of a young boy, about 10 years old. There were no marks of identification. All clothing had been burned off with the exception of a piece of the shirt front, which was kept from burning by the wet deck. We brought the body ashore. I could get up as far as the bridge.

CRASH INJURIES FATAL TO 2 MEN

Clyde M. Boling and Howard Ray Succumb at Hospitals Here.

Two young white men died Sunday in Atlanta hospitals as the result of injuries they received in automobile accidents at Palmetto and on the Roswell road.

They were Clyde M. Boling, 32, of 400 Glen Iris drive, who was fatally injured in a head-on collision at noon Saturday on the Roswell road, and Howard Ray, 23, of Palmetto, who was hurt Wednesday near Palmetto when he drove his light truck into a tree to avoid striking a small girl riding a bicycle.

Boling died at a private hospital Sunday night of head injuries. His car and a machine driven by J. W. Purcell, Chamblee rural mail carrier, crashed together on Roswell road near Wicoma road. Purcell was carried to Grady hospital, where attendants said his condition was "fair" Sunday.

Rites for Boling will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday at the Hightower Methodist church and burial will be in the churchyard with Sam Greenbeck & Company in charge. He is survived by his wife, a sister and six brothers.

Ray, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ray, was taken to the hospital in a private ambulance after he had been extricated from the wreckage of the grocery truck which he was driving at the time of the accident. At Sunday afternoon by Bishop & Fox Fairburn undertakers, for funeral services and burial.

COUNTY ASPIRANTS TO SPEAK TONIGHT

Most Candidates Will Conclude Campaigns at Ed Gilliam's Meeting.

Fulton county candidates for various positions for which nominations will be made in Wednesday's primary will end their stump speaking at a rally planned for 7:30 o'clock tonight at the city auditorium to which Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, candidate for governor, had invited them.

There will be several other smaller meetings in various sections of the county, and Alderman J. C. Murphy, seeking the mayoralty nomination in the September 26 municipal primary, will speak at Adair school, tenth ward, at 7:45 o'clock tonight.

Former Alderman Charles M. Ford, publisher of The Capital, and Councilman Joseph E. Berman, of the fourth ward, announced Sunday they will ask the Atlanta city council tax committee to launch immediately a sweeping investigation of the real estate returns of the Gulf Refining Company for 1933, a matter which has figured largely for the past several weeks in the contest for the state senate.

Ford claims that the tax office furnished figures showing that the 1933 assessments in question were only $217,325 instead of $317,325, the records of the assessors' office show.

G. E. Dupree, the deputy clerk who furnished the figures which the tax committee Saturday that the figure $217,325 was not furnished by him to anyone. There also was an imputation that the $317,325 figure was changed to read $217,325.

Dupree exhibited a slip which had $217,325 on it and asserted it was the same slip which had been furnished him.

Berman said he will seek to prosecute Dupree for false swearing if he again says he did not furnish the $217,325 figure to him.

Both he and Ford presented statements to the Constitution in which they said the $217,325 figure was furnished by the assessors' office and that they had not been tampered with.

Alderman G. Everett Millican, opposing Senator Walter A. Sims, of the 35th Georgia (Fulton county) district, is an employee of the Gulf Refining Company. The Capital claimed Millican as a member of council had obtained a 45 per cent real estate assessment on the basis of the $217,325 figure. Millican contends that the $317,325 figure is correct and is backed by the tax assessors and the tax committee.

He says on that basis that the reduction for the Gulf company is only 12.49 per cent, while the general real estate tax reduction throughout the city was 15.68 per cent.

DeKalb county candidates also will wind up their campaign today and that this night the vote of voters in the Wednesday balloting.

All Fulton county ballot boxes will open at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning and remain open until 7 o'clock at night. All DeKalb precincts will open at 6 o'clock in the morning and stay open until 6 o'clock at night.

Death Toll in Strike Increased to Eleven

ANDERSON, S. C., Sept. 9.—(UP)—Death toll from textile strike violence in the south increased to 11 today.

Charles L. Rucker, 39, a native of Elbert county, Georgia, was wounded in a gun battle when non-union workers tried to break through a line of striking pickets at the Chickamauga mill near Rome, S. C., last Thursday, died in Anderson county hospital late today.

Six other strikers killed in the Hones, S. C., strike were buried yesterday. Three men were killed in Georgia last week and one shot to death by a deputy near a Greenville (S. C.) mill.

TALMADGE SPEAKS AT ATHENS TODAY, ENDING CAMPAIGN

Governor To Be Introduced by Dr. S. V. Sanford; Veterans' Office Praised by Legionnaire.

Governor Eugene Talmadge will make the final public address of his campaign for re-election at 3 o'clock, eastern time, this afternoon at Athens.

The governor will be introduced by Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the University of Georgia, and the University of Georgia will give the invocation.

Many of the governor's friends and supporters are urging him to make a final speech of the campaign over the radio here today on Tuesday night, but he has not yet decided whether this speech will be made or not.

The chief executive has spoken over the radio here once but his friends feel he should make one more talk before the primary Wednesday.

Today's speech will be the sixteenth public address of the governor's campaign which began at Bainbridge on July 4. Since that time he has spoken to great crowds at Louisville, Sardis church, Dalton, Thomson, Griffin, Gainesville, Manchester, Rockmart, Waycross, Savannah, Macon, Ashburn, Albany, Columbus, Newnan and Rome.

While touring between these cities, the governor has stopped and has spoken briefly at Americus, Hawkinsville, Cochran, Darien, Brunswick, Statesboro and Swainsboro, as well as in a number of other places where groups of his supporters had gathered to welcome him as he went through their cities.

Veterans' Office Praised.
Paul J. Ridgway, of Thomas, a member of the rehabilitation committee of the Georgia department of the American Legion, Sunday issued a statement in which he praised the state veterans' service office, an inefficient have no facts on which to make their claims.

His statement follows:
"Pittman supporters who are contending that the efficiency of the veterans' office has been destroyed by a recent reorganization have no facts upon which to base such contentions."

"As a service officer and as a member of the rehabilitation committee of the American Legion, I know that the Georgia state service office has functioned efficiently and is rated second from the top of all service offices in the United States."

"I feel that the people and the veterans of the state of Georgia should be fair in this matter as the facts fail to justify any such criticism but instead justify commendation of Mr. Benson and his assistant for excellent results obtained under the administration of Governor Talmadge."

Ben Hulet to Speak.
The rate situation and what the present public service commission has done to lower public utility and transportation charges in Georgia will be discussed by Ben T. Hulet, member of the commission, in a radio talk.

SLOAN DECLARES PLAN OF GORMAN IS "IMPOSSIBLE"

Impasse Reached on Eve of What Both Sides Expect To Be Climactic Test of Strike's Strength and Efficacy.

SCOPE OF STRIKE EXTENDED FURTHER

All of Branches of Textile Industry Except Silk and Rayon Now Affected by Industrial War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Capital emphatically rejected labor's proposal for a truce in the textile industry tonight, questioned the authority of the unions to speak for the workers and received in reply a confident assertion that they were ready to prove their representation by elections.

This impasse was reached on the eve of what both sides expect to prove a climactic test of the strike's strength and efficacy. Mill owners were determined to open a large number of strike-closed plants tomorrow, and the strikers equally determined to keep them tightly shut down.

The peace proposal in question was offered by Francis J. Gorman, national strike leader. He proposed the president of the arbitration board, constitute itself a board of arbitration, that both factions agree in advance to abide by its decisions and that all mills throughout the industry be closed during the negotiations.

Plan "Utterly Impossible."
"Can the public regard these as serious proposals?" related George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute. "I believe it will conclude that they are of a character which makes them utterly impossible from every standpoint."

He asserted that any arbitration must be between the owners and workers of individual mills, and that stopping all machinery during arbitration would mean that of arbitration, that thousand workers who, according to impartial press reports, are at work should be arbitrarily deprived of employment.

"Can employers be forced to deal with a particular labor organization on behalf of their employees when these same employees have not by membership or election authorized that organization to deal for them?" he asked.

"Mr. Sloan speaks of elections," Gorman replied. "We are ready for those at any time."

The strike leader asserted that "we have the authority and we have demonstrated it by closing the mills." Workers, he added, would "abide by an arbitration board," he asserted, "by the presidential mediation board of which Governor John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, is chairman."

I believe the Winant board should summon Mr. Sloan and demand from him that he act in his capacity as head of the Cotton Textile Institute," said Gorman.

The strike chairman can speak for the textile workers. The board, I believe, should do likewise with the heads of the employers in wool and worsted, silk and the other divisions of the industry."

Although Sloan had agreed to meet tomorrow morning with the arbitration board, he indicated any sort of an agreement before Tuesday night was impossible. Tuesday, he meets with a manufacturers' committee. Tonight he said he was "not authorized" to act for employers but would proceed with "orderly presentation of the facts to the president's board of inquiry."

In asking Sloan to come to Washington, he said he was "not authorized" to act for employers but would proceed with "orderly presentation of the facts to the president's board of inquiry."

PROMINENT ATLANTANS MYSTIFIED BY BELLS

Evidently Sunday is just another day in the life of the donor of the small silver tea bells. At least it is not a day of rest if reports of deliveries are any indication of his activities. Among the prominent Atlanta citizens reporting receipt of one of the mysterious silver tea bells Sunday were:

Governor Eugene B. Black, Federal Reserve bank; Charles Howard Candler, Asa G. Candler, Inc.; Cator Woolford, Retail Credit Company; Sam Dobbs Sr., Dr. Frank Boland and Joe B. Wolf.

In each case the only mark of identification was the cryptic message, "The Bells Will Soon Be Ringing."

'Deceit' Is Charged In Sims Statement

Senator Walter A. Sims, of the 35th Georgia district, opposed by Alderman G. Everett Millican, Sunday issued the following statement regarding the campaign:

"I want to urge my friends to be on the lookout for last-minute efforts to deceive the public as to the real facts that are at issue in this campaign. The voters will get a letter from my opponent not later than Tuesday as the postoffice received 30,000 pieces of first-class mail Saturday morning and it was hauled to the postoffice in trucks of the Gulf Refining Company, that political oil trust of which Andrew Mellon is the head and whose consent Mr. Millican had to receive before entering the race for the senate from the capital district of Georgia.

"The facts are too apparent. There is more money behind the Millican campaign than little $5 and $10 contributors."

Walter Sims' Tactics Assailed by Millican

Alderman G. Everett Millican, candidate for state senate in the primary Wednesday, issued the following statement Sunday:

"My opponent, Mr. Sims, has become desperate within the past several days and continues his slanderous and false statements over the entire county. In this entire race I have made no mention of the personal life or reputation of my opponent and will not do so as I will not drag down the high office of state senator to a campaign of abuse and slander. I have dwelt entirely on my platform and on the official acts of Mr. Sims. The usual type of Sims campaign will continue through election day, and many last-minute false and slanderous statements will no doubt be issued by my opponent, but I am satisfied that the voters of Fulton county will not be misled by such underhanded methods and will by an overwhelmingly vote repudiate such tactics."

Pinchot Calls Session On Jobs and Relief

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 9.—(UP)—Governor Gifford Pinchot, in a proclamation issued today, called the state's assembly into extraordinary session Wednesday "to deal with unemployment relief, and relief alone."

1934-1935 SESSION OF AGNES SCOTT OPENS WEDNESDAY

The 46th annual session of Agnes Scott College at Decatur will open with exercises to be held in the college chapel at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Thomas W. Moore, of the General Electric Company, will deliver the principal address.

Registration of day students will be from 9 until 12 a. m. and 2 until 4 p. m. today, while boarding students will register at the same hours on Tuesday. Orientation classes for freshmen will be held Wednesday and Thursday, and regular classes for all students will begin Friday.

Enrollment is expected to be larger than in the last few years and approximately 35 states and foreign countries will be represented; it was stated. Among the new members of the staff will be Dr. T. W. Whitaker, Miss Ellen Douglas Leyburn, Miss Marian Vaughan, Miss Elmer Hamilton and Miss Margaret Bell.

E. L. BERGSTROM DIES IN SAVANNAH

Member of Prominent Atlanta Family Was Former U. S. Employee.

Ernest L. Bergstrom, 63, member of an old and prominent Atlanta family, died Sunday morning in Savannah following an illness of five months.

He was for many years an inspector and agent with the department of internal revenue and was stationed in Atlanta, Columbus, where he had charge of the department offices, and in Macon. He was retired from active duty July 1, 1933.

Mr. Bergstrom was owner of the famous Isle of Wight for 40 years and was living on the island off the coast of Georgia when he was taken ill. He moved to Savannah to be near his physician.

While he was a student at Emory University, then located in Oxford, Mr. Bergstrom purchased one-third interest in the 7,000-acre island which is noted throughout the south as one of the most beautiful plantations in the state. Later he acquired title to all the island but sold it earlier this year.

He was born in Atlanta, the son of two of the city's pioneer residents, Andrew M. and Martha Mangum Bergstrom. He was the brother of A. M. Bergstrom, former vice president of the First National bank and manager of the Atlanta branch of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and of C. N. Bergstrom, who is secretary and treasurer of the Crystal Carbonic Company. He also is survived by his wife.

Before he left Atlanta, Mr. Bergstrom was active in civic and social affairs and was a pioneer member of the Elks Club here, and of the Trinity Methodist church.

The body will be brought to Atlanta this morning and funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Spring Hill, with Dr. Wallace Rogers in charge of the rites. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

Hot Summer Needs Cool Laxative

In this hot weather, make this cool laxative that actually refreshes and never upsets. It's Fen-a-mint, the delicious mint chewing gum laxative. All you taste is its delightful mint flavor; and all you swallow is the tasteless laxative ingredient that doctors regularly prescribe. And because you chew Fen-a-mint, the flow of beneficial saliva juices is stimulated, and the laxative is distributed uniformly throughout the intestines to give natural, gentle but thorough action. Delay is dangerous, as today get back on schedule and stay there, with non-habit forming Fen-a-mint.

CITY EXPENSES REDUCED

BY VALDOSTA OFFICIALS
VALDOSTA, Ga., Sept. 9.—After maintaining the efficiency of every department for the first six months of the fiscal year, the city administration reports a reduction in expenses of about $1,500 as compared with the same period last year.

Tax valuations in Valdosta decreased in 1934 to the amount of $413,316 as compared to 1933, but only a small portion of this was on real estate values.

UNDERGROUND CELL

PLANNED AT VALDOSTA
VALDOSTA, Ga., Sept. 9.—An underground cell is planned at police headquarters to care for prisoners who indulge in loud profanity to the annoyance of the public.

Councilman Noah Langdale, chairman of the police committee, announced that he was receiving complaint from the public about the language of the prisoners confined in the cells, and asked permission to provide a sound-proof place for them. He suggested excavating under the present cells and making a room where they could be out of sight and hearing. The plan was approved by the council and bids on the work are being asked. It was pointed out that noisy prisoners could not be silenced without violence, which could not be resorted to, so the underground plan was suggested instead.

Four Generations of Webbs

Four generations of the Webb family are shown in the picture above. On the right is Dr. J. F. Webb, of Decatur, next to him is his son, Philip A. Webb Sr., of the Atlantic Sea & Coal Company, and in turn is to be seen Philip A. Webb Jr., recently transferred to Miami as chief freight agent for the state of Florida for the Illinois Central railway. Philip Webb III, 6 years of age, is seated on his father's knee. His mother is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. E. D. Thomas of Atlanta.

Many Battles Against Heavy Odds Won at State Hospital for Insane

"Eternal triangles usually end up in courtrooms but sometimes they take psychological twists and the solution is found only in institutions for the insane. Dr. R. C. Swint, head of the Milledgeville State hospital, said Sunday.

It is this kind of problem Dr. Swint and his staff of physicians have to deal with at the Milledgeville State hospital, and though they battle against almost hopeless odds, their percentage of success is noteworthy. Dr. Swint told of a south Georgia school teacher who went to the hospital recently. Three years previously she had married and apparently was happy. Six months before her admittance, however, she had begun to show symptoms of insanity. She went about her community asking her neighbors and friends to pay her husband. She asked the public to help keep him faithful to her.

Something evidently was wrong. Dr. Swint discovered the real cause of her mental trouble and cured her. Before she was married she had had two beaux and though she loved one of them better she married the other under parental persuasion. Having been reared in a strict and rigid upbringing, the fact that she loved a man other than her husband had caused her to project her personality into her husband, and she had unconsciously condemned herself she publicly blamed him. Because she had sufficient insight to realize her trouble, she was soon pronounced normal and sent home again to forget the "other man."

That is one case, but at the hospital today are 6,088 patients whose mental disorders are worse. A sound physical condition must be obtained in each patient before improvement can be shown and even then the clouds over the brains of the majority are never lifted in the slightest.

Good food, careful medical attention and individual psychological study are given each patient at the hospital, which is the largest institution under the direction of the board of control. They are fed solid, wholesome, clean food three times each day and a total of 488 nurses, are required to take care of them day and night. Many are helpless, some are raving mad but others are able to adjust themselves to a degree and these aid in running the hospital and its farm. None is forced to work but all are encouraged to do so, for occupation tends to quiet them and to build up control of their minds.

The problem of food is a great one. However, under capable direction, the institution has been able to provide the same quality and quantity of food for the patients this year as in the past, although the appropriation granted by the legislature for operation was 25 per cent less in 1934 than for the year previous.

1,300 Housewives Kept Busy.
Nearly 7,000 persons are residents at the hospital, a population greater than that of the city of Milledgeville. Suppose every person in Milledgeville was fed and cared for by one manager? As it is the job keeps more than 1,300 housewives a busy as bees.

Dr. Swint and Homer Bivins, the business manager, however, operate the state hospital at a cost of less than $1,000,000 annually. The hospital has its own laundry, refrigeration plant, mattress factory, broom factory, farms and gardens, and dairy.

The dairy at present produces 100 gallons of milk daily and the hospital purchases 346 gallons more of sweet milk every day from outside dairies, including that of Congressman Carl Vinson. Two hundred and eighty-seven gallons of buttermilk also are used daily.

At the hospital's bakery, 1,800 large loaves of bread and 24,500 rolls are made every day. This vast supply is supplemented by a like amount of cornbread which is baked every day.

State Deaths And Funerals

MRS. EDWARD T. DUKES
QUINTMAN, Ga., Sept. 9.—Funeral services were held here this morning for Mrs. Edward Taylor Dukes, whose sudden death brought deep sorrow to her many friends. She was the former Miss Mattie Rountree, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Rountree, and was a native of South Carolina about 70 years ago. She was a sister of the late D. W. Rountree, of Atlanta, and her surviving brothers are S. S. Rountree and J. B. Rountree, of Atlanta, and her surviving sister, Mrs. Paul Wynne, of Miami, and two granddaughters.

She was a member of the Baptist church and funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. W. Henderson, assisted by Rev. W. F. Smith and Rev. Mr. Marshall.

WILLIAM O. DODSON
SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 9.—William O. Dodson, a well-known Catholic society farmer, was buried today from the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. F. Bevil on Forty-eighth street. She became dead suddenly Friday night while seated in his automobile on State and Barnard streets. He was waiting for his daughter who had gone shopping. When she returned she found her father dead. It was a heart attack.

Henry P. Culp Passes At Home in Athens

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 9.—Henry P. Culp, 53, mayor pro tem, died here today. Mr. Culp was a member of the city council and had been the traveling auditor of the state for eight years. Prior to this he was with the state department of agriculture. His body will lie in state at the Elks' Club, of which he was a member. The funeral will be at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The honorary pallbearers will be R. E. Matheson, Paul Doyal, W. G. Harrison. The mayor, members of city council, police and fire departments will be the active pallbearers.

Georgia News Told in Brief

Note From Lee.
SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 9.—A. A. Solomons, president of the Solomons Company, wholesale and retail druggists, died here today. He was the son of Mrs. J. M. Alexander, of Atlanta, a very interesting souvenir of the early years of the drug business in which his ancestors were interested. This is a note written by General Robert E. Lee while in Savannah in 1870 asking that prescriptions be filled.

The note follows:
"Messrs. A. A. Solomons & Co.: Please prepare for me the enclosed prescriptions and return them with the medicine and oblige." Yours, R. E. Lee, Savannah, Ga., 10 April, 1870."

Thomasville Schools.
THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 9.—While scores of public schools over the state will formally begin their fall terms tomorrow, the Thomasville public schools will not begin the fall semester until Wednesday, September 19.

This is a change from the usual custom of many years past, as the schools here having heretofore opened on the third Monday in this month.

Mrs. G. W. Cox Dies.
CHATSWORTH, Ga., Sept. 9.—Mrs. G. W. Cox, 76, of Spring Place, died unexpectedly today. She leaves a large family of five boys and five girls: W. Lee Cox, Ed Cox, John Cox, Dock Cox, of Murray county; Buell Cox, of Etowah, Tenn.; Mrs. J. A. Willbanks, Mrs. W. B. Robinson, of Spring Place; Mrs. Arthur Robinson, of Rome; Mrs. Anderson Robinson, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Hendricks, of near Milledgeville. She also leaves nearly 100 grandchildren. Funeral arrangements not yet made.

$36,294 U. S. Benefits Paid Georgia Farmers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The farm administration has reached a $1,000,000-a-day speed in its payments to farmers co-operating in the corn-hog adjustment program.

Through August, farmers got $37,073,820 on their adjustment contracts, an average of more than $1,000,000 a day. Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the agricultural adjustment administration's corn-hog section, said today in a preliminary report. Checks with which payments were made totaled $23,000.

Payments through September 4 were reported made to producers in 57 states, including Georgia, $36,294.

AIRPLANE MAKERS WILL BE QUIZZED

Power Manufacturers
Also To Appear Before
Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Airplane and powder makers who have sold their products to the world will be quizzed this week by senate munitions investigators.

Undeterred by the reaction of two South American countries to things already in the record, munitions committee members said they expected further sensational developments before the week was out.

First to face the senators will be officials of the American Armament Corporation, of New York, for continued questioning about efforts to sell war supplies in South America. The probe in that direction had brought a formal diplomatic protest from Argentina, and action by Chile to ascertain full facts affecting her officials' conduct in munitions matters.

The list of witnesses for the second week of the hearings: A. J. Miranda Jr., F. H. Sweetser and Major H. M. Brantley, of American Armament, Monday morning; C. W. Webster and J. S. Allard, of Curtis-Wright Export Corporation, Monday afternoon; and Tuesday: Lamont and Felix du Pont, of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Corporation, of Wilmington, Del., Wednesday; Thursday: F. H. Love, of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, New York, and Donald Y. Brown, of the Pratt and Whitney Corporation, of Hartford, Conn., Friday.

The public study into the huge du Pont corporation's affairs is being made over objections of Irene du Pont, head of the century-old concern. Du Pont's criticism of the committee some months ago irritated several members who sharply answered him. Chairman Nye, republican, North Dakota, announced he had refused the du Pont demand that its trade secrets be withheld from the press.

"These munitions makers have been doing business secretly for so long that it is about time their affairs were made public," he contended. "The very fact protests have come from abroad shows the necessity of continuing. The inquiry will go on."

Brown Shirts To Stay, Hitler Tells Adherents

NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The nazis' political soldiers—the brown shirt storm troops and the black shirt schutts staffel—have come to stay, Adolf Hitler asserted at the nazis' annual party congress here today.

"Only a crazy man or a deliberate liar," der fuhrer exclaimed, "can think that I or anybody else ever dreamed of dissolving what we ourselves built up."

Hearing and applauding their leader's words were 127,000 storm troops picked from all Germany, and 12,000 of the schutts staffel elite, tall, smart troops chosen primarily to serve as bodyguards.

An air-riding "Hitler" greeted the fuhrer as he first appeared on the gigantic Luitpold arena.

Justice W. Overton Dies in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Justice Winston Overton, of the Louisiana supreme court, died suddenly tonight at his residence here. Mr. Overton was a candidate to succeed himself on the bench in Tuesday's democratic primary and was supported by Senator Huey P. Long's organization.

Judge Overton was a brother of Senator John H. Overton, colleague of Senator Long in the United States senate. He was opposed for re-election by Judge Thomas Porter, of Lake Charles, in the third supreme court district.

Grace Line Vessel Is Reported Afire

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 9.—(UP)—A smoldering fire in No. 3 hold was reported by wireless from the Grace line ship Santa Rita, 200 miles off Balboa today. Messages said the fire was minor, and could be extinguished with carbon-dioxide gas sent on a tug from Balboa. The ship was believed in no danger. She was on her way here from South African ports, on her regular run.

Morro Castle Officers Exhausted By Long Battle With Fire at Sea

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Grims and uncommunicative, Chief Officer William C. Warms, of the Morro Castle—who followed sea tradition by sticking with his burning ship—came ashore today from the coast guard cutter Tampa with 10 of the 14 officers and men who stayed with him on his blazing bridge.

Exhausted, and showing the horror of their experiences on smoking decks and storm-whipped ocean, they tramped silently down the gangplank. A cheer in tribute to their courage rose from the Tampa's crew as the little band stumbled onto the dock.

The eleven came down in a stretcher. He was Chief Radio Operator George W. Rogers, of Bayonne, N. J., in a state of physical collapse from his long vigil, with his lungs seared by smoke and flame which enveloped the radio room.

Warms, who succeeded Captain Robert E. Willmott when the latter died suddenly the night before the disaster, carried his right hand tightly wrapped in bandages. The knuckles were broken—how, he didn't know.

Story of Tampa's Fight.
Lieutenant Commander E. G. Rose, of the Tampa, who battled storm and fire for 36 hours and then limped home only when his ship was disabled from the fight, told a graphic story of the loss and beheading of the Morro Castle.

"In my opinion, these men were the heroes of the job," he said. "They stuck with the ship. They elected to stay. The others elected to go—though I don't blame them."

The battle was lost in the storm-swept darkness last night when both vessels were being blown ashore and the 12-inch towing hawser snapped, fouling the Tampa's propeller. The Morro Castle was beached, but the Tampa's anchor held when she was barely a mile or so off Asbury Park.

It took an hour for a dory crew to get the huge hawser to the side of the Morro Castle through mountainous waves and rain, he said, and another two hours of heroic work by the 14 men on the ship's deck to get it aboard and fast.

"They then cut through the three-inch links of the Morro Castle's anchor chains so we could get the tow started. I ordered them to abandon the ship the minute the anchor chain parted. Captain Warms wanted to remain, but the storm was increasing and I felt the men must come off."

"We got under way about 1 p. m. the pilot boat with a line on her stern acting as drag rudder. We made very slow progress and were only about two miles east of Seagriff."

"We proceeded up the coast as far as Asbury Park when the pilot boat line parted—burned through."

"For a couple more hours we fought on up the coast—trying to get the Morro Castle to calm water in New York harbor—but the storm and weather became worse. Later, when we found both ships were drifting toward the beach, we realized it was a case of getting her out to sea or lose her and us ashore. We increased the revolutions of our engines and the towing hawser broke under the strain, the end snapping back and fouling our propeller.

"We dropped our anchor to keep from drifting down on the Morro Castle or going on the beach, and just a few minutes later, it seemed, we could see the Morro Castle against the lights on the beach at Asbury Park. She was ashore."

B. H. JENKINS DIES; WAS STATE EMPLOYEE

B. H. Jenkins, 64, who had been connected with the state revenue department for nine years, died Sunday afternoon at his residence at 830 Ponce de Leon place, N. E. He had been ill more than a year.

A native of Harris county, Mr. Jenkins was a school teacher in Walton county for 15 years prior to coming to Atlanta nine years ago. He was a deacon of the Jackson Hill Baptist church and was a Mason.

In addition to his wife, who is the former Miss Alma Booth, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. R. Terry; two sons, Charles M. and Millard A. Jenkins; four sisters, Miss Ida Jenkins, of West Point; Mrs. E. T. Jones, of Dacula, and Mrs. W. T. Hinton, of Hamilton; and a brother, W. E. Jenkins, of Macon. H. M. Patterson & Son will announce funeral arrangements.

Widow of Willmott Told of Ship Tragedy

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Cremated in his doomed liner, Captain Robert R. Willmott's ashes had not been recovered tonight from the fiery wreck of the Morro Castle.

Although Captain Willmott died of indigestion on board ship, eight hours before fire attacked the vessel, and although millions had the news Sunday morning, his widow was not informed of his death until that afternoon.

Her daughter, Mrs. Robert Reed, of Brooklyn, kept the news from her mother while deliberating how to tell her. Mrs. Reed answered all telephone calls and doorbell rings Saturday morning. But when Mrs. Willmott wondered why her husband did not return home at noon when he was due, she was told that he would never return.

over WGST from 7:45 until 8 o'clock tonight.

Hulet, well known in Atlanta where he has actively participated in politics and civic movements for a number of years, was appointed a member of the commission when the old commission was ousted by Governor Talmadge. Since Hulet has been a member of the commission, electric rates, telephone, freight and passenger rates are among the services which have been reduced in cost to the consumer, he points out.

Judge Claude C. Pittman, of Cartersville, one of the governor's two opponents, will wind up his campaign with a series of radio speeches here. He will speak over Station WSB from 6:30 until 6:45 tonight and again Tuesday from 12 until 12:30 o'clock. Abit Nix, of Athens, will speak over WRB in support of Judge Pittman's candidacy from 12 to 12:30 o'clock today.

Pittman Statement.
Pittman headquarters Sunday issued the following statement:

"Beyond shadow of a doubt we have the battle won and this statement is based on most conservative calculations."

"As far as the outcome is concerned the battle is over. We have conducted a winning campaign that has not ebbed from the very start. The onward march of the Pittman forces to victory has been steady and certain."

"Not only from reliable sources of our own located in every county in Georgia, but also from the Talmadge camp we today predict a sweeping victory that will astound the people when the results are announced Wednesday night."

"At the very start we realized that the present governor is not the choice of a majority of the people of Georgia. Our sole task has been to convince the people of the fact and we have done this beyond all doubt."

"Frantic moves by the Talmadge forces in the last two weeks and a general spirit of rout existing in the camp of the enemy attest the sureness of our victory. They are just beginning to realize what we have known from the start, that the people of Georgia are through, once and for all, with the House of Talmadge and with all the corruption and unscrupulous methods it has used."

"Good government will be restored in Georgia and the people will demonstrate Wednesday that this state, in the mass, never has approved nor never will approve the cheap and selfish attempts of any one man, no matter who he be, to dominate all affairs at all times merely for the personal advancement of his own interests and the interests of his personal and political friends and allies."

Truce Rules in New Orleans But Armies Remain at Scene

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Great numbers of khaki-clad Louisiana national guardsmen today continued to give New Orleans a warlike appearance but the possibility of any open hostilities incident to Tuesday's election was dissipated by an agreement between opposing forces of Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmaley.

Potential armies still graced the "battlefront" set up by the two machine politicians—between 2,000 and 2,500 guardsmen brought to town by Long and 1,500 regulars and recruits of the police force alerted by Walmaley—but the truce signed by the two leaders decreed that the respective armies be kept away from the polling places on election day.

Long summoned the entire state militia in his "dare or die" campaign to whip Walmaley's ticket next Tuesday in the democratic primary in which both have waged a determined campaign to win the election.

Under the truce agreed upon by the two political chieftains, only the armed flying squadron of an arbitration committee cloaked with power over an election even exceeding that conferred upon the "Kingfish" by the legislature, will be permitted at the polls.

Long's troops were quartered along the riverfront. Walmaley's police force were stationed in the city proper. The arbitration committee's 300 men were being assembled downtown to enforce a peaceful election and stop any attempted fraud.

The American Legion tendered 10,000 of its members to insure an honest election. And a citizens' committee of 100 who drafted the arbitration agreement looked on to see that the Long-Walmaley armistice was observed.

Candidates for both sides wound up their speaking campaigns last night in open air rallies. Walmaley's candidates declared that the issue was whether New Orleans would vote for "civil liberties and constitutional rights or surrender to the dictator." The Long candidates in their meetings endorsed his leadership and Representative Joseph O. Fernandez described Senator Long as "the greatest constructive statesman in the United States today."

No change in the weather is expected today or tomorrow, the weatherman said, and temperatures will remain mild.

Sunday the range was between 65 and 86 degrees and today will be approximately the same. Though today will be slightly cloudy there is no rain in prospect but a change in the weather is expected by the middle of the week, it was said.

Church-Going Dog Goes There To Die

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 9.—(AP) Lady was a church-going dog, even in death.

Years ago, Lady, a Belgian police belonging to a family at Isle of Hope, got into the habit of preceding her family to church on Sunday. She would wait for them in front until services were over.

Fourteen years took their toll of Lady. Feeling ill the other day, she went to the church even though it wasn't Sunday. Unable to get in the front door, neighbors said the dog went around to the side.

They found Lady's body there later.

SHIP'S WATCHMAN, DELIRIOUS, RELATES TRAGEDY'S DETAILS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—From the lips of a delirious member of the crew of the Morro Castle came a disjointed but graphic story of his efforts to save passengers from death in the flames that swept swiftly through the ship.

"I know lady that you're 80 years old," Arthur Fender, nightwatchman, muttered, tossing on his bed in Bellevue hospital. "But I'm in charge, and I've got to throw you into the water . . . I know that fire started in a stateroom . . . Take orders from me . . . God, this smoke is choking me—" and he tore at the neckband of his night garment.

"She's cutting her throat with that bunk of glass, Joe . . . Stop her . . . Stop her . . . Look at those bodies burning . . . throw them overboard—overboard . . .

"Never mind getting dressed . . . I'll tie you to this board . . . It will keep you floating. Look at those poor kids down there."

"Poor Captain Willmott. How lucky he is. Poor Captain Willmott!"

Why Some Men Succeed

What a difference there is in men! Some of them are full of pep, energy, ability. They think straight and they think fast. They get there ahead of the other fellow. What's the difference?

Usually a man eats success or failure at the breakfast table. Often he makes or loses a contract according to what he eats for lunch. Wise eating is the smartest thing a business man can do. At least one meal a day, especially in this warm weather, eat Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit.

If you didn't have any other food you could live on this combination, and be mighty well on it, too. It gives your body all it needs for energy, tissue building, and disease resistance, and it gives you brain to keep you regular.

The right food has a great deal to do with your success. Try Shredded Wheat for one meal a day, and see what happens!

FAGGED OUT?

MISS HELEN HICKS rose to the supreme heights of golf to win the women's championship of the United States—defeating the 5-times U. S. champion and the champion of Great Britain on two successive days. A frequent smoker while on the fairways, Miss Hicks learned through smoking Camels how to guard against fatigue. What she has to say on this subject will be of interest to every smoker.

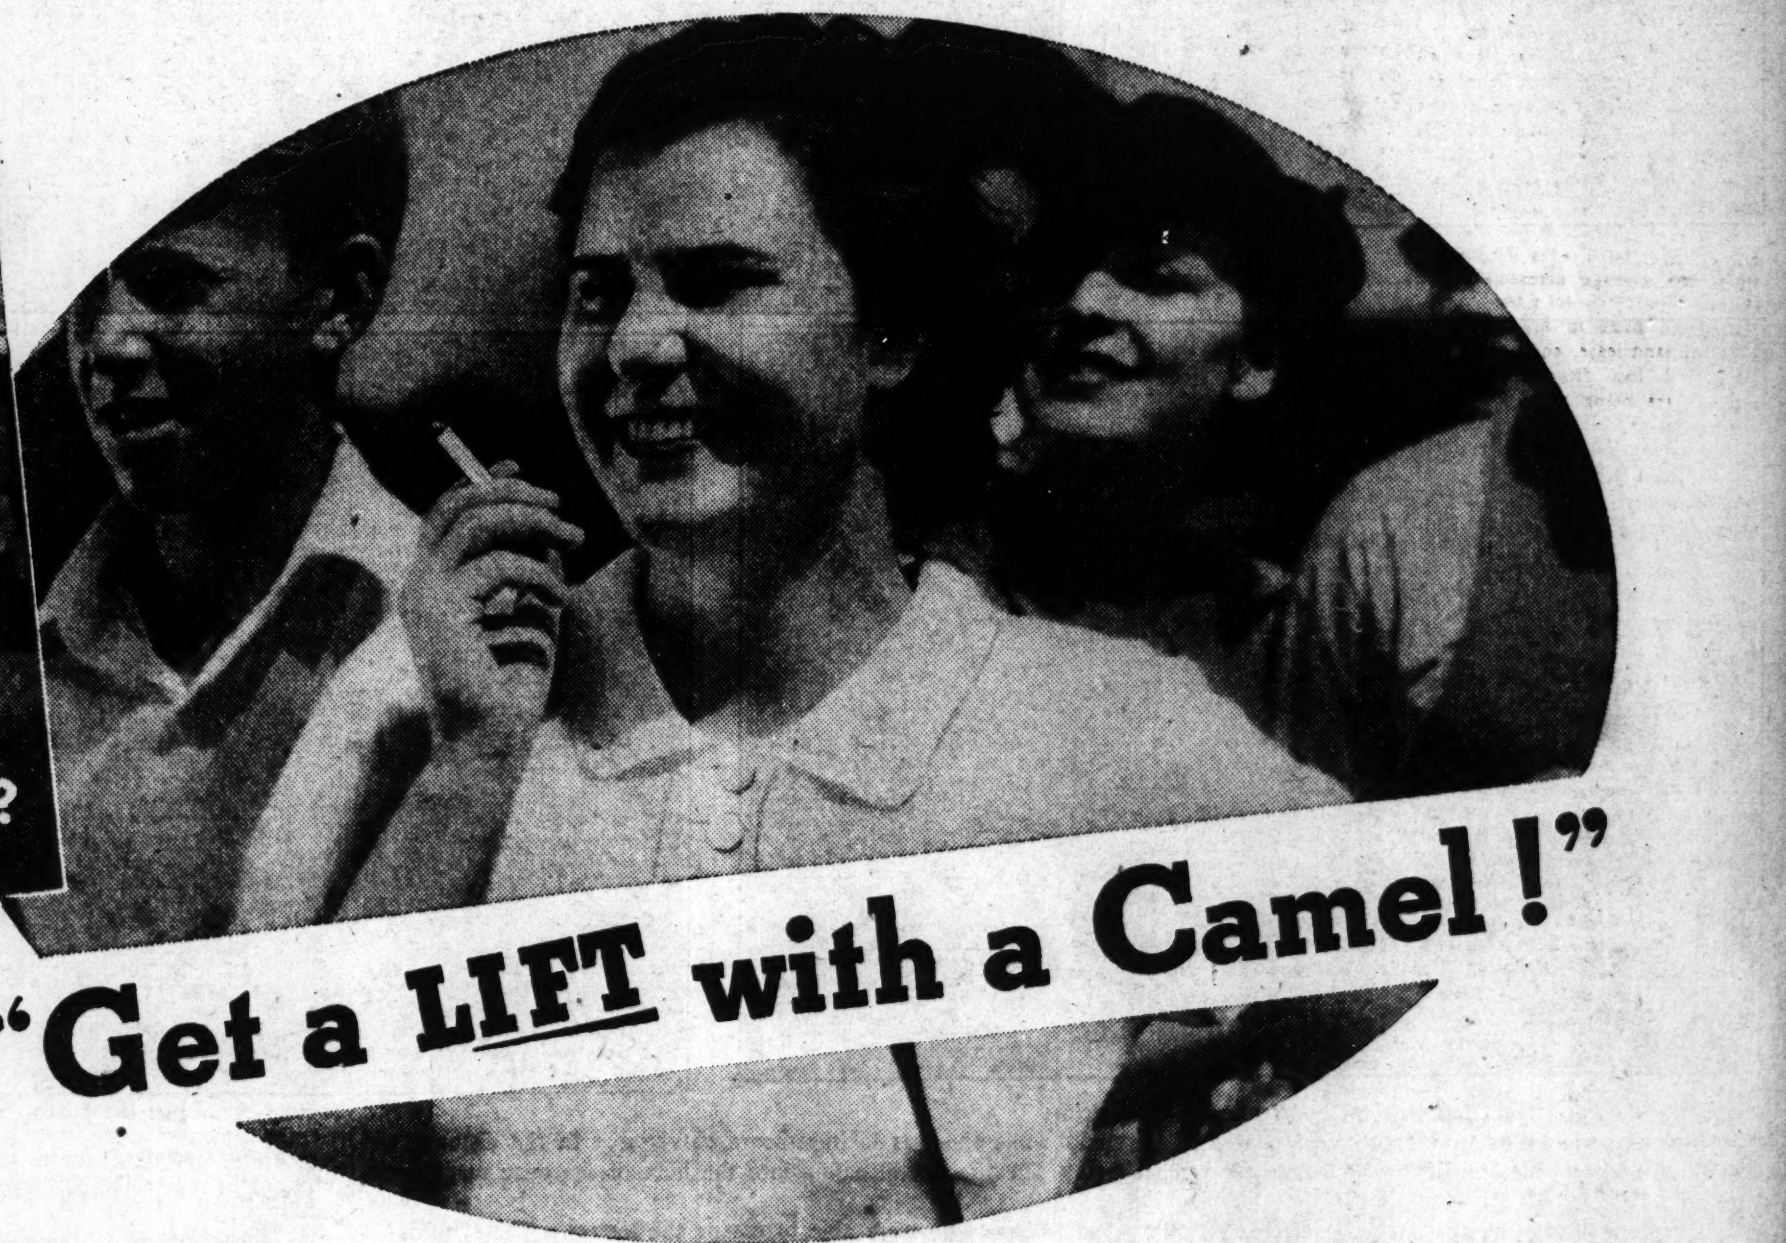

OLYMPIC DIVER. "When I'm tired and feel the need of a 'lift,'" says Georgia Coleman, "I smoke a Camel and soon feel like my real self again. And I like their mildness and different flavor."

OFFICE MANAGER. John W. Groust says: "I smoke Camels steadily . . . all day long . . . and I never even have to think of jangled nerves."

JUNIOR STAR. Ellsworth Vines, Jr., tennis champion, says: "Camels have a refreshing way of bringing my energy up to a higher level. They seem to restore my 'pep' and take away that tired feeling."

"Get a LIFT with a Camel!"

HELEN HICKS tells her way of regaining youthful energy!

THE strain of championship golf puts a tremendous tax upon your energy," says Miss Helen Hicks. "I often find that I'm absolutely exhausted at the finish. But I can always restore my energy quickly with a Camel. For you get a delightful 'lift' with a Camel. And it's a 'lift' that I enjoy often, as I find I can smoke Camels constantly without a sign of jangled nerves."

Every rôle in life has its strain. Every day has its many moments of uncertainty . . . self-distrust . . . "low" spirits. So why not turn to Camels yourself . . . for more smoking enjoyment . . . to offset fatigue and irritability? Thousands of experienced smokers have found for themselves that Camels give a delightful "lift." And science, as you may have read, definitely confirms what they report.

Camels are distinctive in flavor—milder—made from costlier tobaccos. Smoke all you want—Camels never get on the nerves.

First Pictures of Morro Castle Disaster and Rescue of Passengers and Crew

A picture was taken from the S. S. Monarch of Bermuda while she was taking aboard survivors. In the distance are seen three lifeboats making their way to another rescue liner. The fire is still eating into the hulk of the once magnificent Morro Castle.

A picture illustrating the danger confronted by those passengers who were able to escape the flames. These survivors clambered aboard a lifeboat in stormy seas, and safely made their way to the S. S. Monarch of Bermuda. They are shown preparing to board the rescue liner. Hundreds swarmed to the Ward line offices in New York seeking news of relatives and friends who were aboard the Morro Castle. The picture at the left in the center shows a group of them at the pier. The second picture in the center is an excellent air view of the burning Morro Castle, showing plainly the disastrous effect of the flames. Henry Harris, electrician aboard the Morro Castle, is shown at right center, standing beside a rope ladder which he and other survivors used to enter a lifeboat. He was photographed at Seagirt, N. J., just about dawn. Dr. Charles Cochran, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and other survivors after they had arrived at Spring Lake, N. J., just after dawn, are shown in the picture below at left.

The picture at bottom center is of three survivors, the last to leave the lifeboat shown above. The half-dressed woman, suffering from shock and exposure, was just preparing to leave the boat after it was beached.

The Monarch of Bermuda captain, A. R. Francis, shown at right below, superintended the rescue of 65 Morro Castle survivors. All pictures by the Associated Press.

U. S. SEEKS CAUSE OF OCEAN TRAGEDY

Press showed 427 survivors of the fire which swept the luxurious vessel early Saturday, with 111 bodies in New Jersey and New York morgues. Fifteen were not accounted for.

On the basis of a revised Ward Line report showing 353 passengers and crew were aboard, this would leave 22 not accounted for. It was believed they perished in the flames or were drowned and their bodies lost in the sea.

The Ward Line, however, totaled the survivors at 380, with 164 dead or missing.

Differences in reports of the number saved, rescuers said, were accounted for by the fact that the survivors scattered as soon as they were able to do so. Several days may elapse, they added, before a definite check can be made.

Shortly after nightfall the coast guardsmen and firemen who had been aboard the bulk most of the day, left the liner deserted again.

They planned to reboard her before dawn tomorrow, when they will try to wet the vessel with fire hose streams enough to permit further investigation below decks. The blaze still raged in the hold.

All morning coast guardsmen had tried to get aboard the mass of burning wreckage but the intense heat forced them back.

At noon, a breeches buoy was obtained. R. W. Hodge, acting commander of the fifth district coast guard, was first to board.

Almost immediately on reaching the deck he found the body of a small boy, badly charred. Another body was nearby.

"If there are any bodies in the hold, there wouldn't be anything left except molten jewelry," Hodge said.

Captain's Body Missing.

The last prevented those who boarded the ship from learning immediately what had become of the body of the captain, Robert R. Willmott, who died Friday night on the bridge.

Neither had the Ward Line offices in New York, to which the chief officer, W. F. Wams, proceeded on the coast guard cutter Tampa, issued any statement on the disposition of the captain's body.

One of the first to board the blackened hulk was Carl Bischoff, city manager of Asbury Park.

"It was the most desolate sight I have ever encountered," he said, as he landed back on the beach in the breeches buoy.

"Because the smoke and heat were so intense, we couldn't explore the ship beyond the superstructure, all inflammable parts of which have been burned."

"Their remains much weird evidence of the tragedy on the extreme fore and aft decks. Parts of these decks, for some unaccountable reason, haven't been charred."

Captain W. N. Davis, vice president of the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Corporation, in charge of the salvage of the vessel, said the Morro Castle's keel is buried in eight feet of sand.

Two coast guard launches were being used to shift the stern of the liner to facilitate subsequent efforts to float the ship.

"If we can't remove the ship, and I think the possibility of taking it out to sea again is very remote," Davis said, "it will have to be dismantled here. If it can be taken out to sea again, I don't believe the owners will find it necessary to scrap it."

The once luxurious liner, bound for its home port in New York from an Havana cruise when fire broke out early Saturday morning, was imbedded in the ocean bottom 150 feet from the end of the Convention Hall pier at this Jersey coast resort.

Plates Warped.

Hull plates were warped, the superstructure was twisted by the holocaust, cabin windows smashed in by those who fought for their lives in the morning of horror.

The bow, evidently, was the last section of the ship to burn. All survivors seemed in agreement that the fire had started in the ship's library—how, was still a mystery to be clarified in the various investigations that have been started.

The oil tanks of the electro-turbine liner were near the library.

As the fire still crackled forward, city firemen in mid-afternoon stretched a hose out to the ship and started pouring a stream into the hold to cool the plates and extinguish the blaze.

Beasts Aboard.

Four lifeboats could be seen from the shore dangling from davits—evidently the access to them had been cut off from the passengers by the fire and dense smoke.

These lifeboats had a capacity of between 60 and 70 persons each. But the eight boats floated reached the shore with far less than their complement.

The sunny Sunday drew large throngs to the seashore to view the rescue and salvage operations.

Admission Charged.

Officials charged 25 cents a person to view the ship of distress from vantage points. Proceeds will be turned into a survivors' fund. Beach concessionaires, too, quickly capitalized.

Attached to the stern of the ship were two wooden signs—the only inflammable things left untouched by the fire. They read:

"Keep clear of the propellers."

On the curve of the stern of the ship were the words: "Morro Castle." It was once the pride of the Ward Line.

All the while, the smoke from the fire in the hold, poured steadily through the aft funnel.

From the bow of the ship, a Jacob's ladder dangled down to the water's edge.

Apparently had been used by Captain Wams and the 10 officers and members of the crew who remained aboard on the bridge, even while the fire raged below, after the ship was taken into tow by the cutter Tampa.

Storm Barks Tow.

At first, the cutter started to tow the ship to New York harbor. The tremendous seas thwarted the plan and the ship was beached.

The Tampa docked around noon at Staten Island, in New York bay.

Those with Wams included Irwin Freeman, second officer; Tom Hackney, third officer, and George Rogers, radio operator.

Rogers, suffering from severe shock, was taken to the United States Marine hospital, on Staten Island.

Ward Line officials, who met the cutter at Staten Island and took the party to the offices in New York on a chartered tug boat, permitted none to talk.

Praise for Crew.

Lieutenant Commander E. G. Rose, commander of the Tampa, said of Captain Wams and those who stuck by the ship:

"In my opinion, these men were the heroes of the job. They stuck. They elected to stay. The others elected to go—though I don't blame them."

Commander Rose said the battle to tow the ship to New York was lost because of the darkness and storm last night when the wind started blowing the cutter and the liner ashore.

Then, the propeller shafts of the cutter could no longer stand the strain. The liner was beached as a last resort.

Throughout the day, the lines of families and friends trod sorrowfully through the morgue at Seagirt and in other towns.

R. A. Holden, famous Yale tennis player, was one of those who searched through the rows of dead in the Seagirt morgue. Beside one body, he stopped. It was that of his wife, friends, shielding him from view, placed arms about his shoulders.

Gaining composure, Holden said he and his wife were awakened by commotion and din outside their cabin.

"Looking through the porthole," he said, "we could see the glow of flames. Mrs. Holden and I went across the passageway and got our two sons out of their cabin."

"We went up on deck and found groups of people huddled about deck rails, near the stern."

Holdens Jumped.

The Holdens jumped. In the excitement, Mrs. Holden was separated in the water. Holden and his two sons were picked up by rescue boats.

The coast guardsmen wanted to hasten their investigations over the ship in order to lend all help to the inquiries that may get under way tomorrow.

One has been ordered by Secretary Daniel Roper, of the department of commerce; another by the Ward line. A third will be carried on by the Steamboat Inspection Service.

In Library.

From the accounts of the survivors, there seemed little doubt that the blaze started in or near the library. It was thought by many of the crew who reached the shore in safety that it spread at once to fuel tanks. With the gale raging against the liner, the flames were swept aft. With the subsiding of the nor'easter, the fire spread to the forward quarters.

Not Lightning.

While some said the liner was struck by lightning, J. R. Jones, commodore of the Ward Line, said it was impossible that lightning could have started the blaze.

The Ward Line officials said their investigation, also, would include the actions of the crew, inasmuch as some surviving passengers said the crew offered little help.

Most of those in the lifeboats that reached the Jersey shore were members of the crew. They said the passengers refused to attempt the passageways filled with flame and smoke to reach the boat deck—the upper deck of the ship.

After the coast guardsmen had boarded the ship, newspapermen and photographers were allowed to brave the breeches buoy and clamber aboard.

They wore wet towels about their faces as protection against the smoke and heat from below.

In the salons on the B deck, they found the ship's bar, with its steel chairs and tables of modern style, warped. But all was in orderly arrangement.

The wood floor had been destroyed, but the furniture still rested on the steel-plated flooring of the deck.

Melted remains of glasses were seen on tables—evidently left by late-drinking passengers at the alarm of fire.

OFFICER BOARDS SMOKING LINER

Fire was still raging beneath the blistering plates under my feet, and I was unable to get up to the bow of the ship which was enveloped by smoke.

The decks were all warped and blackened. There was nothing left of the interior of the upper decks. I tried to go below by climbing down on the outside of the ship to decks below the boat and promenade decks, but I found the whole interior of the ship had been eaten away by the flames which were still devouring the forward section.

There is no such thing as state-rooms now. The walls between cabins have been burned away, and just heaps of ashes where people were living.

You couldn't recognize anything. It was horrible. The ship seemed just a mass of twisted steel plates and ashes. It will be several days before she will cool off enough to permit anybody to get down in her hold.

We found ladies' pocketbooks, about a dozen of them—strewn around on the afterdeck. Underwriters' representatives took charge of them.

The wireless room was destroyed by the fire and most of the bridge. The wood covering of the promenade and boat decks had burned down to the steel plates.

The bow of the ship did not seem to be burned as badly as the midship and the aft sections. The deck there was on fire during the five hours I was aboard and that indicates to my mind, that the flames broke out toward the stern of the ship and ate their way forward.

I noticed one lifeboat still in its davits on the starboard side and three on the port side. Smoke was pouring from two of them. Certain spots were so intensely hot that I could not approach them.

ANN STEPS OUT

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Although Ann Drayton has loved Douglas St. John since childhood days in Baltimore, she tells him that she must go away to college. He has never really noticed Ann until Nick speaks to her. When John's secretary's health forces her to go away, he turns her work over to Ann. John, subject to heart attacks, has Ann to come to his home to do pressing work, and is surprised when his thoughts turn to her as his wife. Nick knows now that he has been in love with Ann from the first but he speaks to her for John, saying John is shy. When Jean, Ann's 15-year-old sister, leaves a note saying she is going to New York to go on the stage, John insists upon giving Ann a check to enable her to locate Jean. She finds Jean in a dingy boarding house, cold and hungry. Jean is happy to be back home. She had feared that her love for Dick Nelson would interfere with her "career," but that is forgotten. She does not want to go back to high school and John insists that she go to the law office. Nick and Ann receive invitations to the wedding of Doug and Gail and he takes her to the party. Nick has to go to the end party at his home at Gibson Island. Now so on with the story.

INSTALLMENT XV.

Doug saw only Ann. He stood there with the cocktail glass in his hand and looked at her. Was she really she? The room was blank of people except for her. He saw only the tall slender girl in a blue dress with a small head of tight curls set nobly on her shoulders. Was this the girl he had thought commonplace beside Gail? He looked at her firm little chin, the sweep of her long thick lashes, and slim hands.

"What have you been doing to yourself?" he asked, thinking it was a stupid thing to say. "You look marvelous." Resentment and bitterness for her were gone out of him. "Business girl," said Ann and then, "I hope you'll be very happy." Her voice did not quaver. She must make Nick proud of her.

Mrs. St. John, a dignified matron, joined them. "Is this Ann?" she asked. "What my dear, I didn't know you. They turning Gail?" "You'll really have to hurry and change. Your train leaves in an hour."

Nick was looking at the girl who had won, and the girl who had lost. "He sees now," he thought, "this mistake. Anybody can see. Ann is the lovely girl here."

They said the conventional things and left. Ann tucked her arm through his going down the street.

"You were magnificent," he said. "I have a magnificent curiosity," she said. "What is the surprise?"

In the car, he said, smiling, "I'm telling you, I'm like a little boy going to a birthday party who tells his host about the present before he goes." He chuckled. "I'm giving a party for the week-end at my place at Gibson Island and you're the guest of honor. You'll like the people—old friends of mine, people who write or paint or chase the news. What do you say?"

Ann laughed warmly. "You're telling me, you said."

Nick's party was already in progress when he arrived with Ann. . . . She had stopped home, packed a few clothes, introduced Nick to her family, and hurried out to his waiting car. She could not forget the graciousness with which he treated her family. They had seemed slightly awe-stricken at receiving Nick Hamilton in their modest home, but Nick's friendliness had immediately put them at ease.

Driving along in the crisp night air, he had said, "Your parents are nice—real people. I missed that. My parents didn't have time to bother with us. Your sister is a real beauty."

She had liked that, coming from Nick.

Gibson Island was rather a bleak deserted place in winter. Some families stayed there the whole winter, but, for the most part the houses were open only in summer.

"I give Gregg Anthony the key," said Nick. "Introduce you to them but you probably won't be able to remember all their names."

"I'll get to know them. This is my first house party, you know. I don't know anything about the etiquette of them."

"A girl as pretty as you needs only to sit or lie on the divan and look beautiful smile now and then, and listen to the men talk about their selves. If you do that, you'll be a great success."

It was 10 o'clock when they arrived. Nick's house was situated on a hill and a sweeping lawn rolled before it. As they stopped the car in the stone driveway, they heard music and voices from the house.

"The party without a host," said Nick.

Ann stopped in the driveway for a moment and touched his arm. "I know you are doing this. I know it's because you don't want me to be alone tonight and think about Doug."

"Yes, that's it," he said and smiled.

"Where have you been?" she cried almost in surprise. "To the wedding? How was it? You both look awfully dressed up. And you say this was not to be a dressy party?"

"Ann, you are going to get out of these clothes at once," said Nick, introducing her to every one. "When I bought this house, I swore that it was going to be a house of comfort and informality."

Ann was shown to a pretty bedroom on the second floor. It was twin beds, bright chintz draperies, an old desk and hooked rug. When Ann was undressing, one of the girls came in. "We're roommates," she said. "I'm Ruth Ashton, commercial artist."

She joined Nick and the other guests a short time later. She liked to start to dance but the room with the enormous fireplace, rustic furniture and deer heads on the unfinished walls.

At 11 o'clock they were hungry and since Nick in his haste had forgotten to send a servant, several young men and women got into cars and went in search of a local grocery store. They returned in a short time with their arms laden.

"The storekeeper was in bed but we got him up."

In a wonderfully short time they sat down in a hurriedly prepared feast in the kitchen. Ann loved the spirit of friendliness and informality. And she knew that Nick was enjoying his own party tremendously.

When the feast was over, they kicked back the rugs and started to dance. Ann liked to dance with her head cunched against the rough tweed of Nick's suit. She liked to feel her body moving in rhythm with his. That old feeling of wanting to be made love to by him possessed her again. She wanted, because she felt gay and happy in his handsome house in the company of congenial people, to be caught up swiftly, ardently by him and loved.

Another young man broke in. "Here—what is this—dancing with this gorgeous blonde all evening? Not fair—even if you are the host."

"Try to find one falser," said Nick, surrendering her to him. "Where has Nick been hiding you?"

"I'm hidden every day in an office," she said. "But it's really a very nice office. What do you do?"

"I'm a reporter—so help me—and this is my night out. The little brunette with the long elegant holder is my wife. She's a newspaper girl, too, and a bright one. We call ourselves 'partners in crime' but we love it."

It was two o'clock before they ceased dancing. Eyes became sleepy, mouths yawned, and legs refused to carry them to the rhythm of the music. They filed off to bed.

At three o'clock no one was in the large room except Nick and Ann. She was stretched out on the chaise longue and Nick sat at a footstool at her feet, poking at the fire.

"I've never had such a good time," she said. "They are real people. They work hard and they play hard. But they all work. And they all seem to have some sort of career mapped out for themselves."

"I like people like that, too. That's why I have them around me."

Ann leaned back her head and closed her eyes. Her dark lashes fluttered.

"Tired?" he asked.

"No—the lull after the storm. I guess. It's so quiet here now. And when the wind comes a little way you can smell the bay and hear the wind flapping the trees against the house. It's wonderful. If I had a house like this I'd never leave it."

"I leave it," said Nick, "because I'm lonely."

"Your mother and sister, why don't they?"

"They don't approve of me. They wanted me to marry a girl when I came out of college and I refused. She was nice and I liked her but I didn't love her. Too unfair to her. My mother is a strange woman. She's proud. She loved my father a great deal but she didn't pay much attention to him. And when he died quite suddenly from heart trouble, she never forgave herself for neglecting him. Louise, my sister, is bitter. Some day I'll tell you all about them."

"Before I marry John?"

She saw something new in his eyes—something she didn't understand. It was neither passion nor tenderness. Ann didn't know, but it was the thought of the loss of her and—futility. "Before then."

"Sometimes I don't understand you," said Ann, "but I shall always think you are the most wonderful person in the world. Why, after all, should you take such an interest in me? I'm flattered by it. Sometimes it scares me a little. You've given me so much, and I've given you—nothing. Nothing."

"You're the honest woman I've been looking for," he said, trying to shake off the feeling of futility. "You've loved me. You are all that most girls are not."

"Am I an experiment?"

He laughed softly. Impulsively he leaned up and put his lips against her hand and Ann looked on down his head. They did not say anything and she was strangely moved by his gesture. "I don't know, but this man loves me? If he does, why doesn't he say it? Why doesn't he kiss me into believing and loving him? It isn't because of John that he is holding back. Nick is the kind of man who takes what he wants. I feel very close to him and yet I don't understand him."

After a while she said, "I'm tired. You mind if I go to bed now? I've had a very trying day."

He turned and looked at her, and at the way her head rested on the bright pillow. He lifted his head. "Don't go—yet. We'll sit here by the fire. Go to sleep if you want. I want you to stay because . . ."

"Nick?"

The gesture of lifting his head was defiant.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

THE STORY OF SCHOOLS.

VI—A Century Ago.

"Reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic, taught to the tune of a hickory stick." Those words tell us something about schools a century ago. Learning in those days was supposed to be a hard business. It was believed that the purpose of the teacher was to "drive" facts into the heads of the pupils; and in trying to do so, the schoolmasters did not spare the rod.

three months in one school and then went to another village to drive a little learning into the children there. Close at hand, if not clutched under one of his arms, he kept a stick, usually of birch or hickory. The benches, as a rule, were logs which had been split lengthwise so as to give a flat surface. The master was likely to have a three-legged stool on which he could sit when he was not busy attending to the pupils.

It was fancied by many persons that the "thrash" was enough, or more than enough, for pupils of those days to learn. Some of the masters did not know much about the third "R," arithmetic. They could teach how to add and subtract, but they had trouble with dividing and dealing with decimals.

That is not a pleasant picture, but it is cheerful to know that men in many lands were at work trying to bring about better schools and better methods of teaching. One of these was Joseph Lancaster, an Englishman, who loved children and tried to make things better for them. Finding that teachers in general were poorly fitted for teaching, Lancaster trained some of his own pupils for the work. He started a "monitor" system in which older pupils took care of little ones, each monitor having charge of 10 small pupils. The monitor system helped lead to the starting of normal schools, where students were given special work to make them ready for teaching.

Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity Gives Dance at Druid Hills Club Sept. 28

An event of outstanding social importance in the fraternity circles is the formal dance to be given by the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity on Friday, September 28, at the Druid Hills Club. The alumni chapter in Atlanta, of which Ross Glover is president and which is composed of 200 alumni members, is giving this dance during rushing season in honor of the activities and rushes of the local chapters at Emory and Georgia Tech, as well as those of Mercer and the University of Georgia.

Robert F. Tuttle, national president of Pi Kappa Alpha, and Mrs. Tuttle; Robert M. McFarland Jr., acting national treasurer of the fraternity, and Mrs. McFarland; Charlton Keen, district president for Georgia and Florida; Ross Glover, president of the Atlanta alumni, and Mrs. Glover; Nick Wheeler, head of Beta Kappa chapter of Emory University, and Jack Powell, head of Alpha Delta chapter at Georgia Tech, will form the receiving line.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Horace Smith, chairman, and Joe Eberhart, Ross Glover, Nick Wheeler and Jim Betty. This social function will mark the beginning of a season of activities in the alumni chapter which will thereafter convene each month for business and social sessions.

Here's Strength for Rundown Women

"My mother used to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After I grew up she gave it to me. I have been doing housework for eleven years. I felt weak and tired at certain times. Your medicine gave me more strength and built me up when I was rundown."—Mrs. Mary Gorman, 413 Adams St., N. E., Minneapolis, Minnesota.

If you are weak, nervous and rundown give this medicine a chance to help you. Your druggist sells it.

Keep Make-Up Out of Your Pores With Foundation Cream

By MIGNON.

1. One fine firm has delved into the foundation cream business and brought forth a very superior product. It is nice and smooth and goes on so easily that you are completely sold the first time you use it. It seems to me that these foundation creams are all of different consistencies, but, with practically the same results to be obtained, they all go on differently and all wind up by leaving a thin film of a non-greasy substance on the skin to protect the pores from make-up.

I have my favorites but they are not always what others prefer and I find that the ones I like are those best for dry skins. The others who experiment with me choose, if their skins are oily, a different make. I can by this time recommend the foundation creams of various reliable manufacturers, and tell you from experience which are best for the different skin types. If you want to know about them I'll be glad to tell you.

BATH FOR TIRED EYES.
2. I can tell you of an eye lotion which may be used on pads of cotton over the eyes for five or ten minutes, or with an eye cup externally. It is wonderfully restful.

This is great for sportsmen or for eyes smarting from driving in a strong wind. It's the little things like this that make women lovelier and they are so well worth the thought, the time and the effort.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone Mignon at 2200 Constitution. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Legion Auxiliary Will Observe Constitution Day September 17

By Latimer Watson, Director of Publicity, Georgia Division American Legion Auxiliary.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Sept. 9.—Particular significance is attached to the observance of Constitution Day September 17 this year, and it is urged that every auxiliary make the day one of vital importance in its community. The observance of Constitution Day and Constitution week has always been an important part of the national Americanism program, but never has there been such need for it as now.

Because of the alarming growth of un-American propaganda, which seeks to undermine the confidence of our American people in the constitution of the United States, in our system of government, in fact in all American tradition, every post, every Legionnaire and every auxiliary member is called upon this year to plan a real, effective Constitution Day observance.

Programs may be constructed according to the desires of the auxiliary, but particular attention should be paid to the schools. Chairmen should arrange programs in grade schools, high schools, colleges and universities. Civic and luncheon clubs should be asked to base their programs on constitution day. Churches should be contacted. In fact a comprehensive program planned to touch every citizen is urged.

Chairmen are also asked to arrange for publicity through the newspapers, radio stations; to ask the mayor of the town to issue a proclamation calling upon all citizens to take part in the observance and to display the flag on September 17.

Through these means and others that will occur to individual chapters there will be a reawakening of faith and confidence of all people in our constitution and a dedication to the principles set forth in that document, thus helping to defeat the inroads of radical forces who seek to tear down the constitution and our form of government.

The attention of publicity chairmen of the various auxiliaries is directed to the loving cup to be awarded to the auxiliary whose chairman does the most effective publicity during the year. The cup will be presented at the 1935 convention by a committee to be named later.

Publicity chairmen are asked to send to the director of publicity, Miss Latimer Watson, Columbus, clippings that have appeared in their local papers. The cup will be awarded not only on the annual publicity chairman gives her auxiliary, but on its effectiveness.

Are Social Courtesy Debts or Welcome Opportunities?

By FLORENCE LA GANKE.

Laura and I am bringing a gift for the guest of honor so I don't see but that I have repaid my debt. It isn't as if she were entertaining me in my own right. I am asked because she wants to do something for Laura and knows I know her.

Before they could get any further in the discussion the front door was reached. Later on, after the party, was nothing but a pleasant memory and after Laura had received her gift and the girls had all gone home the two guests, Frances and Augusta, continued the subject on their way home in Augusta's car.

They decided that they really had repaid their obligation to the hostess by coming to the party and by bringing a gift. After all, the real debt was the bride-to-be. She owed her hostess, plus all the girls who had given her gifts, a social debt. The chances were that she would pay it off soon after she was married for such affairs would give her a chance to show her new home.

"Well, you know, Augusta, I can't figure out whether I owe anything to my hostess. True she asked me to the party, but she is giving it for

As Frances and Augusta walked from the car to the house they were deep in discussion. "This is the third shower being given for Laura that I have attended. If my invitations keep piling up I shall soon be kept busy from now until next January repaying the social debts I owe."

As Frances and Augusta walked from the car to the house they were deep in discussion. "This is the third shower being given for Laura that I have attended. If my invitations keep piling up I shall soon be kept busy from now until next January repaying the social debts I owe."

JOHNNY DOBBS PASSES OF HEART ATTACK

They may say this about John Gordon Dobbs whose tired heart stopped yesterday in Charlotte, N. C.—he was a great baseball man; he was as gentle and as kindly as a woman; he was honest and courageous and he never quitted on a job no matter how difficult it appeared.

He liked best to get a cigaret lit and lean back in a comfortable chair and dig back into his more than 30 years of baseball for some of the stories he liked.

And he liked best the story of Bones Parvin, "the old Missouri train robber," who pitched for Wheeling, W. Va., in 1898. I recall the first time he told the story. It was at Douglas, Ga., in the cold and rainy spring of 1930 when the Crackers were training there.

And the talk had gone this way and that. It had covered that brawling year of 1909 in the old Sally league when Dobbs had come back to baseball and was playing centerfield for the team that was to win the Sally league pennant. He "borrowed" Pitcher Al Demaree, later to become famous as a pitcher for John McGraw, and won that pennant. And the night it was won he and his team had to climb down the back steps of a hotel in Augusta and be pulled to the station in a huge sawdust wagon.

They carried pistols in the ball bag in those days and Dobbs had come through all that. He had broken in with Cincinnati in 1899 and he went through all the hardships which were the lot of a rookie in those days. He had seen all of baseball and he liked it all.

He defeated Atlanta's 1909 Southern league pennant winners for the Dixie championship in 1909 and next year embarked on a great career that was to close out yesterday in a hospital bed at Charlotte a few days before his team was to begin the play-off series for the Piedmont championship.

He had seen a lot and heard a lot, but he liked the story of Bones Parvin best.

"THE MISSOURI TRAIN ROBBER."

Dobbs and another youthful companion had gone to Wheeling to play baseball. The friend was calling himself Sammy Strang and hoping that his wealthy and prominent parents in Chattanooga would not discover that Sammy Strang was really Strang Nicklen, who liked baseball so well he was to become a major league star and neglect a concert career begun in Europe and a military career in the American army. But that is another story.

I recall that rainy afternoon at Douglas.

"Did I ever tell you about Bones Parvin, the old Missouri train robber?" asked Dobbs. Of course, he hadn't. And so he started.

"They can talk about Rube Waddell and Bugs Raymond as eccentric," he said, "but they were mild compared with Bones. He came into Wheeling that year from some town in Texas and said he could pitch. He could.

"When it was his day to pitch he would pull off his shoes and go marching through the streets of whatever city he happened to be in. He was usually followed by a group of admiring kids. And he would shout, 'Come out to the game today. Bones Parvin, the Missouri Train Robber, will pitch. Come and see the great Bones Parvin pitch today.'

"He never failed to do that. We always suspected he had been a train robber but we never knew. But I can see him yet, barefooted in those dusty streets, trudging along yelling that the Missouri train robber would pitch."

BONES AND SAMMY STRANG.

When he had told much of the story Dobbs always stopped to chuckle for a few moments. And then go on about his favorite baseball character.

"He roomed with Sammy Strang," Dobbs would say. "That is, he did for a while. One day Bones was getting a haircut in a barber shop. Sammy Strang came along and saw him through the window, a big platelass one."

"He stopped and began making faces at Bones. We were all kids and we liked to have fun with him. I recall that Sammy Strang applied his thumb to his nose among other things and this enraged Bones."

"He carried a little old owl-head pistol and what was Sammy Strang's horror to see Bones yank out his pistol and fire. He thought sure he was shot, but the bullet from the little old pistol wouldn't break the heavy plate glass."

"A few nights later Sammy awoke with the feeling that something had passed very close to his face. He opened his eyes and saw Bones' big knife in the pillow just before his face. And Bones was laughing fit to die."

"Sammy," he said, "I was just trying to see how close I could come to your nose without hitting it."

"Sammy changed roommates."

That was Johnny Dobbs' favorite baseball story of all the myriad he knew.

THE MEN WHO MADE THE GAME.

There are but a few of the men left who saw baseball come through all its great brawling years of growing to be the greatest game in the world.

They were of a different mould, those early heroes of the game. They were fighters and they played to win. Their business was winning games and they played with a spirit which was purely amateur. It was not tainted with business and finance as it is today.

One wonders what will become of the game when the last old veteran, who grew up with the game, is gone. The greater figures, John McGraw, Wilbert Robinson and a host of others are gone. And now the minor league sees perhaps its greatest and best known figure, Johnny Dobbs, pass on.

The new owners and managers and players will probably carry the game on. But I will always think it will lack something, some of the fire and color and intensity which the old-timers gave it.

DOBBS WAS A FIGHTER.

Dobbs was small but he was a fighter. He never avoided a brawl when he thought it was hurting his chances to win a ball game. He never won a fight but he never avoided one when it meant his baseball rights were being voided.

One of the things he most regretted occurred shortly after he took over the Atlanta team. The first night game was being played. There were 10,000 people in the stands at Ponce de Leon park.

The umpire, a big fellow standing six feet and weighing better than 200 pounds, called a bad decision at first and when Dobbs remonstrated Dobbs let fly. He was more than 50 years old and the umpire was in the prime. But Dobbs leaped high enough to hit the umpire flush on the jaw and all but knock him down. He was sorry immediately. But he never quite forgot the old days when baseball was a battle, not just a game.

He was a courageous, capable, honest and kindly man. He did a good job all the years of his life. And that, I think, is epitaph enough for any man.

CRACKERS BEAT PELICANS, 9-5; CANA HOMERS

Atlanta Wins Second Game Under Moore; Casey Gets Credit.

By Jimmy Jones.

Those wonderful birds, the Pelicans, whose beaks can hold more than their... (oh, you know the rest)... were temporarily restrained in the process of clinching the last-half pennant by their old teammate's ball club again Sunday as Eddie Moore's Crackers put on some extra steam to take the final game of the five with the second-half pennant by the score of 9 to 5, before a Sabbath turnout of 2,257.

It was also the Crackers' second win over the league leaders in the three games they have played under the direction of the chunky Mr. Moore and they will start a new four-game series with the Birmingham Barons this afternoon at 3 o'clock with a lot of renewed vigor.

MILNAR IS WILD. They won yesterday by taking advantage of the breaks and the wildness of young Al Milnar, the Pelic's big rookie left-hander, who relieved Frank Ragland in the eighth and walked three Cracker batters hand-running to force in two runs.

In fact, young Milnar, who, when wild, is very, very wild, might have walked everybody on the ball club had not Manager Larry Gilbert put the hooks on him and pulled him out of there in favor of Fred Johnson after he had delivered three straight balls to Taft Wright.

Johnson, the league's leading pitcher last year, finished walking Wright to force in another run, but finally got the side out, leaving the bases full.

The Crackers had to come from behind again to get under the wire with victory, just as they did in the first game of Saturday. But once ahead, they stayed there.

Hugh Casey, the young right-hander just sold to the Chicago Cubs, drove a long fly to left and Hughes scored. Gilbert, on the coaching lines, reprimanded Carson rather sharply for not moving to second on the play, but he didn't have to do it. He proved, when Holman drove a double over third, sending him around to that position and Jack Ward scored them both with a single to right.

Well, that put the Crackers in a hole, but they came right out of it with four in their half of the first. Eddie Moore, who can get more bases on balls than any player in the league, simply because he makes the pitchers get the ball in there before swinging at it, walked to start it and Dick McKee followed with a single to center. Then Heinie Mueller, the young second baseman, forced McKee at second, but when "Booie" Carson, the big right-hander, scored, Harley Boss, Jr., Moore scored and Mueller reached around to first.

GILBERT PROTESTS. Gilbert protested this extra advance on the ground rules which usually limit the runner to two bases on such throws, but Moore argued the point with his ex-boss and won it. Mueller stayed at third, and the bases were a moment later on Harry Taylor's long liner to center after Oana had walked. That made two runs, then Taft Wright whipped a single to right for his first of three hits, sending Oana to third and Buster Chatman doubled past Carson to score the prince and Wright with the third and fourth runs in the first inning.

PRINCE HITS ONE. Oana gave impetus to the drive in the third when he hit his fifteenth home run of the season. The prince, first batter up, tied off with a scoring drive over to his favorite spot in right field—the foot of the Orange Kist sign—and while it came with some noise, it broadened the Crackers' working margin.

Casey settled down and pitched beautiful ball for the next six innings, only 18 men being hit during that time and giving up his or run.

Atlanta picked up one more off Ragland in the seventh on Wright's double which scored Oana after the latter had walked and reached on a hit by Harry Taylor's single. Taylor might also have scored, but slackened his pace some rounding third where Koehler tried to flag him, and was cut down at the plate, Ward to Hughes to Aubrey.

The Pelicans came back for two in their half of the eighth on singles by Hughes, Berger and Carson and another fly-out by Rose, pushing up to within one run of the Cracker lead, making the score 6-5.

New Wing Oil Company Offers High Quality Products at Economy Prices

STATION POPULAR
WITH CAR OWNERSCourtland Street Shop
Fully Equipped To Render Varied Auto Service.

Ready recognition of high quality as well as a natural demand for economy is reflected in the steadily increasing popularity of the New Wing Oil Company's 24-hour service station at 157 Courtland street, at the corner of Ellis street.

The New Wing Oil Company, of which Oscar and M. Harley Sikes are co-owners, has been a popular focal point for auto servicing ever since its establishment at its present location in 1930.

The company, which also operates four other stations on highways leading into Atlanta, offers three of the most popular brands of Pennsylvania motor oil, selling high-grade 100 per cent Pennsylvania oil at 17 1/2 cents a quart, together with high-grade anti-knock gasoline. This gasoline, declared to be equal to the best, is offered at New Wing stations at two cents below the cost of most other high-grade products.

The New Wing Oil Company's economy prices are made possible because it buys all its products in large quantities direct from the refinery. It maintains its own large storage tanks on the A., B. & C. railway tracks here.

Cost of Living Shows

Gain of 0.6 Per Cent

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The cost of living of wage earners continued its upward trend with a rise of 0.6 per cent from July to August, according to the monthly survey of the national industrial conference board. The increase brought living costs to a level of 3.5 per cent above that of a year ago, but 21.0 per cent below that of August, 1929.

pressure lubrication, its station is fully and modernly equipped for washing and polishing. It maintains one of the most modern hoist-lifts to insure easy access to every vital point in lubrication work.

Not only the downtown station but its outlying units are staffed by efficient, courteous and capable men, each thoroughly trained for the work he handles. This factor alone has played an important role in making the New Wing Oil Company's units unusually popular with the motoring public.

Since the company's stations are owned and managed personally by Oscar and Harley Sikes, these men know by name most of their hundreds of regular customers, many of whom have patronized the Courtland street station ever since its establishment.

Since the Courtland street unit is easily and quickly accessible to the business and theater district, many auto owners leave their cars at the New Wing station during business hours or while attending the theater. This service has done a great deal to popularize New Wing.

The Messrs. Sikes report all four of their outlying stations do a consistently heavy gallonage business and are very popular with the highway motorist. These stations handle the same high-grade products as may be obtained at the downtown station.

The motorist is invited to visit the New Wing Oil Company at any time, day or night, to inspect the complete facilities offered at its station, and to confer either with the Messrs. Sikes or any of their trained attendants concerning the forthcoming necessity for cold-weather change of oil, gasoline mixture and anti-freeze protection for their cars.

Ragsdale Motor Co. Reports
Gains by Hudson, Terraplane

The Hudson and Terraplane are sweeping forward to new peaks of popularity, declares J. A. Ragsdale, president of the Ragsdale Motor Company, in East Point authorized dealer for these two cars.

Evidence of this steady gain, says Mr. Ragsdale, is clearly reflected in the fact his company, to date in September, has made almost as many deliveries as during the entire month of August. It is further illustrated by Mr. Ragsdale's assertion that sales for these two cars throughout this year have registered a consistent four-to-one increase over those for 1933.

Hudson and Terraplane sales, Mr. Ragsdale declares, are showing a similar gain in all parts of the country, making necessary a day-to-day factory production approximately four times as great as in any previous year. From the standpoint of his own business, he declares new car sales this year have experienced greater increase than in any of the 10 years since the establishment of the Ragsdale Motor Company.

Despite the present unsettled state of industry, Mr. Ragsdale predicts Hudson and Terraplane demand will continue at the same tempo during the coming months, showing no sign of abatement.

Prospective automobile purchasers are invited by Mr. Ragsdale to call the Ragsdale Motor Company and to arrange for thorough demonstration

SUPERIOR IN FIELD

Dealer Reports Increasing

Demand for Rags

and Polishing Cloths.

Properly handled, even a rag has personality, declares Emil Rothschild, manager of Rothschild & Company,

329 Decatur street, S. E., dealers in superior, guaranteed, washed and sterilized wiping rags.

"To most people," says Mr. Roth-do not realize there are various grades and many uses for them."

For example, he points out, the same type of wiping rag or polishing cloth would not be used on a fine piece of furniture, china or painting

as would be used in a machine shop, printing plant or garage.

It is Mr. Rothschild's job to know the materials he handles, and to know the uses for which they are best adapted.

TARZAN AND THE CITY OF GOLD No. 145

As the royal hunting lioness Tarzan, Nemone gazed eagerly at the savage beast. "It is enough!" she cried. "Belthar knows his way, now will he lead the trail until he has tracked down Tarzan and killed him!" She turned then to Tarzan coldly: "Belthar will devour you!"

Along the lane of warriors, spears were thrust into the ground. From their shafts floated pennons of different colors. The populace, and even the nobles and the Queen, laid wagers as to the color of the pennon which would be nearest the spot where Belthar made his kill.

The wild light of madness gleamed in Nemone's eyes. The supreme moment of her revenge had arrived. Now would Tarzan pay dearly for spurning her love. In bitter frenzy she cried a command, and Phorodis, captain of the hunt, slipped the golden collar from Tarzan's neck.

The lord of the jungle, now the quarry in mad Nemone's "grand hunt," ran forth along the spear-bound Avenue of Death. He counted his steps, knowing that at the hundredth, the swift Belthar would be loosed upon him. The ape-man had a plan, but he doubted it would work!

DAILY SHORT STORY

BLUE GHOST

His Wife Was Dead, But Nightly She Returned to Him, and His Second Helpmate Was Driven to Despair.

BY ELLEN C. PHILLIPS.

Nothing but the end of everything could have interrupted Eve's romance with Roger Lanning. Blair Conway could not know that when he pitted his brotherly influence against that springlike ecstasy.

Eve only laughed at him. "We love each other," she insisted. "Sure, that's great. But here's the thing," he argued. "He's my best friend and all that, but he's been married—"

"Alice has been dead for two whole years. And if anything is dearer than an old love I'd like to know it." Even Blair could see the love of her when her gray-green eyes turned suddenly golden with mischief and her dimples twinkled in fire-pink cheeks. He laid one heavy hand on her slim shoulder and spoke seriously.

"There was never a love like this, Eve. You're a darling kid, as sweet as they come, but Alice was an extraordinary woman—she had a wild, free spirit that could never die. That's what would come between you and the man she loved so fiercely. He has never forgotten her, and he never will. No man could. His own eyes darkened as if they saw again that vivid personality.

A little shiver went through Eve. "I knew you were a darling kid, as sweet as they come, but Alice was an extraordinary woman—she had a wild, free spirit that could never die. That's what would come between you and the man she loved so fiercely. He has never forgotten her, and he never will. No man could. His own eyes darkened as if they saw again that vivid personality.
